■ At-risk for service interruption

DWSD has made significant enhancements to customer service to help Detroiters stay connected and improve the collection rate for the benefit of all ratepayers. In the winter season, DWSD does not interrupt service for non-payment when the temperatures are below 32-degrees. Due to this seasonal factor, the number of residents at-risk for a service interruption historically increases.

DWSD will have a new customer outreach and communication program led by MCCI to help residential customers avoid a service interruption. In terms of non-residential customers, several tools are being used including payment plans, civil legal action, placing the past due amount on the tax rolls, and offering credit options.

Customer Care: Nonresidential At-Risk for Service Interruption*

DWSD does not interrupt water service at nursing homes, apartment buildings and senior complexes. The department pursues other actions to collect past due balances from the property owner.
